

Alice Roosevelt

1884-1980

Theodore Roosevelt's firstborn daughter, Alice, was seen as an intelligent, stubborn, and strong-willed young woman.

She smoked, bet on horse races, and even carried her pet snake in her purse!

In 1905, she went on a tour of Asia with other representatives from the United States for her father.

She was so popular and well-loved by the public, that she had songs and even a color named after her— "Alice Blue."
